the first world war led to a radical reshaping of europe s political borders nowhere was this transformation more profound than in east central europe where the collapse of imperial rule led to the emergence of a series of new states new borders intersected centuries old networks of commercial cultural and social exchange the new states had to face the challenges posed by territorial fragmentation and at the same time establish durable state structures within an international order that viewed them as at best weak and at worst as merely provisional entities that would sooner or later be reintegrated into their larger neighbours territory fragmentation in east central europe challenges the traditional view that the emergence of these states was the product of a radical rupture that naturally led from defunct empires to nation states using the example of poland and the baltic states it retraces the roots of the interwar states of east central europe of their policies economic developments and of their conflicts back to the first world war at the same time it shows that these states learned to harness the dynamics caused by territorial fragmentation thus forever changing our understanding of what modern states can do
