this book examines descriptions of the natural world in a wide range of old english poetry jennifer neville describes the physical conditions experienced by the anglo saxons the animals diseases landscapes seas and weather with which they had to contend she argues that poetic descriptions of these elements were not a reflection of the existing physical conditions but a literary device used by anglo saxons to define more important issues the state of humanity the creation and maintenance of society the power of individuals the relationship between god and creation and the power of writing to control information examples of contemporary literature in other languages are used to provide a sense of old english poetry s particular approach which incorporated elements from germanic christian and classical sources the result of this approach was not a consistent cosmological scheme but a rather contradictory vision which reveals much about how the anglo saxons viewed themselves for many children much of the time their experience in classrooms can be rather dull and yet the world the school is supposed to initiate children into is full of wonder this book offers a rich understanding of the nature and roles of wonder in general and provides multiple suggestions for to how to revive wonder in adults teachers and curriculum makers and how to keep it alive in children its aim is to show that adequate education needs to take seriously the task of evoking wonder about the content of the curriculum and to show how this can routinely be done in everyday classrooms the authors do not wax flowery they present strong arguments based on either research or precisely described experience and demonstrate how this argument can be seen to work itself out in daily practice the emphasis is not on ways of evoking wonder that might require virtuoso teaching but rather on how wonder can be evoked about the everyday features of the math or science or social studies curriculum in regular classrooms
