Place/No-Place in Urban Asian Religiosity

2016-07-15

this book discusses asia s rapid pace of urbanization with a particular focus on new spaces created by and for everyday religiosity the essays in this volume covering topics from the global metropolises of singapore bangalore seoul beijing and hong kong to the regional centers of gwalior pune jahazpur and sites like wudang mountain examine in detail the spaces created by new or changing religious organizations that range in scope from neighborhood based to consciously global the definition of spatial aspects includes direct place making projects such as the construction of new religious buildings temples halls and other meeting sites as well as less tangible religious endeavors such as the production of new mental spaces urged by spiritual leaders or the shift from terra firma to the strangely concrete effervesce of cyberspace with this in mind it explores how distinct and blurred and open and bounded communities generate and participate in diverse practices as they deliberately engage or disengage with physical landscapes cityscapes it highlights how through these religious organizations changing class and gender configurations ongoing political and economic transformations continue as significant factors shaping and affecting asian urban lives in addition the books goes further by exploring new and often bittersweet improvements like metro rail lines new national highways widespread internet access that bulldoze both literally and figuratively religious places and force relocations and adjustments that are often innovative and unexpected furthermore this volume explores personal experiences within the particularities of selected religious organizations and the ways that subjects interpret or actively construct urban spaces the essays show through ethnographically and historically grounded case studies the variety of ways newly emerging religious communities or religious institutions understand value interact with or strive to ignore extreme urbanization and rapidly changing built environments

a leading expert provides an engaging firsthand portrait of american judaism today american judaism has been buffeted by massive social upheavals in recent decades like other religions in the united states it has witnessed a decline in the number of participants over the past forty years and many who remain active struggle to reconcile their hallowed traditions with new perspectives from feminism and the lgbtg movement to do it yourself religion and personally defined spirituality taking a fresh look at american judaism today jack wertheimer a leading authority on the subject sets out to discover how jews of various orientations practice their religion in this radically altered landscape which observances still resonate and which ones have been given new meaning what options are available for seekers or those dissatisfied with conventional forms of judaism and how are synagogues responding wertheimer provides new and often surprising answers to these questions by drawing on a wide range of sources including survey data visits to countless synagogues and revealing interviews with more than two hundred rabbis and other informed observers he finds that the majority of american jews still identify with their faith but often practice it on their own terms meanwhile gender barriers are loosening within religiously traditional communities while some of the most progressive sectors are reappropriating long discarded practices other recent developments include start ups led by charismatic young rabbis the explosive growth of orthodox outreach and unconventional worship experiences often geared toward millennials wertheimer captures the remarkable if at times jarring tableaux on display when american jews practice their religion while also revealing possibilities for significant renewal in american judaism what emerges is a quintessentially american story of rash disruption and creative reinvention religious illiteracy and dynamic experimentation
