this collaborative volume is concerned with long term social change envisaging individual societies as interlinked and interdependent parts of a global social system the aim of the contributors is to determine the extent to which ancient societies were shaped over time by their incorporation in or resistance to the larger system their particular concern is the dependent relationship between technically and socially more developed societies with a strong state ideology at the centre and the simpler societies that functioned principally as sources of raw materials and manpower on the periphery of the system the papers in the first part of the book are all concerned with political developments in the ancient near east and the notion of a regional system as a framework for analysis part 2 examines the problems of conceptualising local societies as discrete centres of development in the context of both the near east and prehistoric europe during the second millennium bc part 3 then presents a comprehensive analytical study of the roman empire as a single system showing how its component parts often relate to each other in uneven even contradictory ways how do professional associations build their resources and establish authority what are the conditions under which professional expertise can be mobilized for political action if professional organizations are endowed with a wealth of resources do they use them responsibly or only for economic monopoly what is the potential scope of professional action today in this pathbreaking study of the legal profession terence halliday raises and addresses these questions combining extensive data from the rich archives of the chicago bar association one of the nation's largest and wealthiest bar organizations with data from a national survey of bar legislative and judicial action beyond monopoly demonstrates that the primary commitment of lawyers to economic monopoly has long been complemented by civic professionalism as the legal profession takes on more responsibility in the american democratic system when state capabilities diminish through his examination of three types of state crises in the 1950s and 1960s the challenges to legitimacy in the legal system the crisis of individual rights during mccarthyism and the civil rights eras and the fiscal crises of various state governments halliday shows that large bar associations can have extensive influence on any institution that is regulated by law he argues that lawyers have the capability of turning social and political issues into technical legal matters in what he calls an idiom of legalism under technical guise lawyers come to exercise moral authority halliday maintains that the american legal profession over the past century has gone from a formative stage when controlling its market in the delivery of legal services was paramount to an established phase in the past two decades when it has committed extensive resources to the complex needs of the modern state a de facto bargain has been struck if the state leaves the profession's monopoly fairly intact the profession can use its expert resources to help the state adapt to strain and crisis it can do so not only in the legal system where it has been championing autonomous law but in other spheres as well from the economy to the private sphere of individual rights halliday confirms that the legal profession deploys its expertise not merely to attain professional dominance to control a market or to purvey an ideology but to increase the viability of democratic institutions beyond monopoly introduces a pioneering approach to a historical and comparative sociology of the professions that will be of vital interest not only to sociologists but to political scientists and lawyers as well in lost modernities alexander woodside offers a probing revisionist overview of the bureaucratic politics of preindustrial china vietnam and korea he focuses on the political and administrative theory of the three mandarines and their long experimentation with governments recruited in part through meritocratic civil service examinations remarkable for their transparent procedures the quest for merit based bureaucracy stemmed from the idea that good politics could be established through the development of people the training of people to be politically useful centuries before civil service examinations emerged in the western world these three asian countries were basing bureaucratic advancement on examinations in addition to patronage but the evolution of the mandarines cannot be accommodated by our usual timetables of what is modern the history of china vietnam and korea suggests that the rationalization processes we think of as modern may occur independently of one another and separate from such landmarks as the growth of capitalism or the industrial revolution a sophisticated examination of asian political traditions both their achievements and the associated risks this book removes modernity from a standard eurocentric understanding and offers a unique new perspective on the transnational nature of asian history and on global historical time
