Discordant Neighbours: A Reassessment of the Georgian-Abkhazian and Georgian-South Ossetian Conflicts 2013-03-27 the 2008 georgian russian war focused the world's attention on the caucasus south ossetia and abkhazia had been de facto independent since the early 1990s however russia s granting of recognition on 26 august 2008 changed regional dynamics the caucasus is one of the most ethnically diverse areas on earth and the conflicts examined here present their own complexities this book sets the issues in their historical and political contexts and discusses potential future problems this volume is distinguished from others devoted to the same themes by the extensive use the author a georgian specialist makes of georgian sources inaccessible to most commentators his translated citations thus cast a unique and revealing light on the interethnic relations that have fuelled these conflicts for every great country house of the georgian period there was usually also a town house chatsworth for example the home of the devonshires has officially been recognised as one of the country s favourite national treasures but most of its visitors know little of devonshire house which the family once owned in the capital in part this is because town houses were often leased rather than being passed down through generations as country estates were but most crucially many london town houses including devonshire house no longer exist having been demolished in the early twentieth century this book seeks to place centre stage the hugely important yet hitherto overlooked town houses of the eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries exploring the prime position they once occupied in the lives of families and the nation as a whole it explores the owners how they furnished and used these properties and how their houses were judged by the various types of visitor who gained access georgian literary sources for late antiquity are commonly held to be later productions devoid of historical value as a result scholarship outside the republic of georgia has privileged graeco roman and even armenian narratives however when investigated within the dual contexts of a regional literary canon and the active participation of caucasia s diverse peoples in the iranian commonwealth early georgian texts emerge as rich repositories of late antique attitudes and outlooks in marxist anthropological theory shamanism represented one of the early forms of religion that later gave rise to more sophisticated beliefs in the course of human advancement the premise of marxism was that eventually at the highest levels of civilization the sacred and religion would eventually die out znamenski 2007 p 322 though history has of course since disproved this the theory clearly had a great bearing on what was written in the former soviet union about shamanism and also on people s attitudes in the former soviet republics towards such practices on the other hand it has been suggested that all intellectuals driven by nationalist sentiments directly or indirectly are always preoccupied with searching for the most ancient roots of their budding nations in order to ground their compatriots in particular soil and to make them more indigenous znamenski 2007 p 28 although this might apply to searching for the roots of christianity in georgia when it comes to searching for the roots of pagan practices interest on the part of the people of georgia is generally speaking not so forthcoming this impasse coupled with the effects of the repressions against religions including shamanism unleashed by the soviet government between the 1930s and 1950s along with the recent surge of interest in the georgian orthodox church a backlash to the seventy years of officially sanctioned atheism makes research into the subject no easy business however hopefully this study will at least in some small way help to set the process in motion charles dibdin 1745 1814 was one of the most popular and influential creative forces in late georgian britain producing a diversity of works that defy simple categorisation he was an actor lyricist composer singer songwriter comedian theatre manager journalist artist music tutor speculator and author of novels historical works polemical pamphlets and guides to musical education this collection of essays illuminates the social and cultural conditions that made such a varied career possible offering fresh insights into previously unexplored aspects of late georgian culture society and politics tracing the transitions in the cultural economy from an eighteenth century system of miscellany to a nineteenth century regime of specialisation charles dibdin and late georgian culture illustrates the variety of dibdin s cultural output as characteristic of late eighteenth century entertainment while also addressing the challenge mounted by a growing preoccupation with specialisation in the early nineteenth century the chapters written by some of the leading experts in their individual disciplines examine dibdin s extraordinarily wide ranging career spanning cultural spaces from the theatres at drury lane and covent garden through ranelagh gardens sadler s wells and the royal circus to singing on board ships and in elegant regency parlours from broadside ballads and graphic satires to newspaper journalism mezzotint etchings painting and decorative pottery together they demonstrate connections between forms of cultural production that have often been treated as distinct and provide a model for a more integrated approach to the fabric of late georgian cultural production being single in georgian england is the first book length exploration of what family life looked like and how it was experienced when viewed from the perspective of unmarried and childless family members using a micro historical approach amy harris covers three generations of the famous musical and abolitionist sharp family the abundance of records the sharps produced and preserved reveals how single family members influenced the household economy marital decisions childrearing practices and conceptions about lineage and genealogy the sharps exceptional closeness and good humor consistently shines through as their experiences reveal how eighteenth century families navigated gender and age hierarchies marital choices and household governance the importance of childhood relationships and the life long nature of siblinghood stand out as central aspects of sharp family life no matter their marital status along the way being single explores humor music religious practice and belief death and mourning infertility disability slavery abolition philanthropy and family memory the sharps experiences uncover how important lateral kin like siblings and cousins were to marital and household decisions the analysis also reveals additional layers of georgian family life including single sociability not centered on courtship the importance of aunting and uncling on their own terms the ways charitable acts and philanthropic endeavors could serve as outlets or partial replacements for parenthood and how genealogical practices could be tied to values and identity instead of to biological descendants possession of property ultimately the sharp siblings remarkable lives and the single family members efforts to preserve a record of those lives show the enduring contribution of unmarried people to family relationships and household dynamics
