Murders in London 2: 2 New Cases of Inspector James 2015-02-20 whilst much recent scholarly work has sought to place early modern british and irish history within a broader continental context most of this has focused on western or northern europe in order to redress the balance this new study by david worthington explores the connections linking writers and expatriates from the later tudor and stuart kingdoms with the two major dynastic conglomerates east of the rhine the austrian habsburg lands and poland lithuania drawing on a variety of sources including journals diaries letters and travel accounts the book not only shows the high level of scholarly interest evidenced within contemporary english language works about the region but how many more british and irish people ventured there than is generally recognised as well as the soldiers merchants and diplomats one might expect we discover more unexpected and colourful characters including a polymath irish moral theologian in vienna an orphaned english poetess in prague a welsh humanist in cracow and a scottish physician and botanist at the vasa court in warsaw this examination of the diverse range of irish scottish welsh and english religious intellectual political military and commercial contacts with central europe provides not only a more balanced view of british and irish history but also continues the process of reintegrating the histories of the european regions furthermore by extending the focus of research beyond widely studied areas towards other more illuminating international aspects the book challenges scholars to analyse these networks within less parochial and more transnational settings
