George Lillo's domestic tragedies provided the impetus for the development of new forms of serious drama during and after the eighteenth century on the continent as well as in the English-speaking theatre. This edition makes available for the first time all of the plays known or thought to have been written by the playwright in reliable old spelling texts following modern bibliographical principles. Some have not been reprinted since 1810. Even the much-studied London Merchant has not previously been published in an edition that recognizes the errors contained in the first edition and the authorial revisions introduced in early reprints. The introduction to each play treats its sources, histories of publication, and reception in the theatre and textual problems. The apparatus criticus and historical collations provide full bibliographical detail. Commentary notes discuss the author's use or adaptation of sources and furnish information about links among his own plays, topical background, and literary allusions. Steffensen edition makes possible an informed awareness of Lillo's lesser-known plays in a variety of genres as an enlightening context for further study of these influential domestic dramas. This book provides a framework for designing behavioural systems in schools that recognize empathy as its core driver. It presents a systemic discourse on introducing steps in schools to promote inclusivity and acceptance. The book analyses how empathy can be integrated into every aspect of school education. It focuses on the role of schools in nurturing compassion in young children and providing a positive psychological atmosphere for them. The author outlines the concept of empathy and its application to organizations in general and its specific application within school systems. Drawing from theoretical and empirical literature, the book examines the designs for holistic empathy-driven learning, highlighting its role in fostering social integration and developing social and emotional skills in students of diverse backgrounds. This book will be of interest to students, teachers, and researchers of education, organizational psychology, organizational behaviour, and child psychology. It will also be useful for educationalists, schoolteachers, school management professionals, heads of schools, and parents. This book offers a detailed record of one of the world's oldest environmental pressure groups. It raises questions about the capacity of pressure groups to influence policy and finally assesses the campaign as a major factor in the emergence of modern town and planning. And as a backdrop against which to examine current issues, racing is a team sport. Everyone who races pretty much has the same car and the same equipment. What sets us apart is our people.
