the relationship between offender and criminal justice practitioner has shifted throughout rehabilitative history whether situated within psychological interventions prison or probation this relationship has evolved and adapted over time but interpersonal processes remain central to offender work however little work has critically focused upon the challenging task of developing and sustaining positive relationships with offenders this book addresses this gap providing an in depth exploration of the processes which underpin correctional relationships within probation through an innovative methodology it examines how practitioners can enhance their practice by understanding how relationships form deepen and end effectively for the first time it draws on the experiences of offenders and practitioners to uncover the darker side to relationships identifying how they can rupture and break down from this exploration it presents alternative ways in which relationships can be repaired and safeguarded within correctional practice in essence this book assists practitioners in becoming successful supporters of change in an increasingly competitive and politicised climate this book outlines how political and organisational tensions can impact upon the flow of relationships across the criminal justice system uniquely this book examines how these tensions can be overcome to produce transformative changes lewis suggests that therapeutic correctional relationships can thrive within a number of correctional settings and presents the core principles of relational practice and dynamic model of therapeutic correctional relationships to assist in achieving quality and sustainable practice this book will appeal to criminological and psychological scholars as well as students studying probation and prison practice offender rehabilitation and desistance

long term supply relationships are of crucial importance in industrial organization the present revolution in information and communication technology such as e business is proof of the increasingly dynamic environment in which firms operate as a result firms have to focus on their core competencies and obtain complementary ones from partner firms to be able to survive this can hardly be realized without having long term supply relationships in the past decades research on strategic alliances the class of interfirm arrangements to which long term supply relationships belong mushroomed many of the empirical studies in the alliance literature focus on a single variable that is then explained by a set of independent variables for example for international joint ventures the level of commitment interdependence asymmetry and dedicated investments explains the development of trust by itself there is nothing wrong in this approach on the contrary because of all these studies we now have some knowledge about the reasons why firms enter in alliances and why some alliances are more successful than others in fact one of our first studies also belonged to this research tradition deborah luise lutz explores support work relationships the relationships between people with intellectual disabilities in receipt of a personal budget and their support workers through the methodology of institutional ethnography she specifically investigates how personal budget policies that organize support work in germany and australia influence support work relationships she found that the policies of personal budgets are connected to people s views and expectations about the support work relationship and the support work context that influence the relationship the author argues that disability research policy and practice need to be cognisant of this interconnection to improve the quality of support work relationships social exchange in developing relationships is a collection of papers that deals with the systematic study of the development of relationships the papers discuss several theoretical perspectives such as evolutionary theory personality theory cognitive developmental theory equity theory role theory and attribution theory one paper discusses romantic relationships the evolution of first acquaintance to close or intimate commitment another paper presents the hypothesis that the factors causing a relationship to begin will also probably steer intermediate cognitive processes eventually influencing the nature of the relationship commitment requires specific concepts such as input levels contributed to the relationship duration of these inputs and their consistency of occurrence the equity theory suggests that equity principles determine the selection of one's mate and how they the partners will get along in the future one paper analyzes the dynamic theories of social relationships and the resulting research strategies that the conceptualization of a parameter of a social relationship can affect the choice of data collection techniques and other matters sociologists psychologists historians students and academicians doing sociological research can benefit greatly from this collection this book describes many different and useful ways of understanding personal relationships from a dialectical perspective it is written for scholars in higher education both faculty and students across many fields within the social sciences and the humanities who seek answers to questions about how people relate to one another the book is valuable for all scholars who pursue new ideas because it models a form of scholarly communication in which multiple voices can be acknowledged as valid the worth of one perspective is not measured by the denigration of another and difference is celebrated as conducive to learning rather than threatening to it the contributors emphasize the characteristics of their dialectical view that set them apart from other dialectical authors and describe their methods of studying relationships from a dialectical perspective following the bakhtinian perspective they honor how do people develop in their important relationships how do two people come together to form a new close relationship how do relationships affect or determine who we are and who we become these questions should be central to the study of mind and development but most researchers neglect relationships and focus instead on analyses of individuals as if people were basically alone experiencing occasional fleeting moments with other people research based on this individualist assumption has dominated the behavioral and clinical sciences but there are other voices and they are growing in this book many of the scholars who are moving relationships and attachments back to the center of human development outline their central concepts findings and perspectives people are fundamentally social and relationships are part of the fabric of being human forming an essential foundation that molds each person's mind and action a mind does not reside in one person but in relationships and communities composed of many people's interconnected minds which mutually support and define each other from the start and throughout life each person develops strengths and vulnerabilities in important relationships in communities and cultures those relationships are so central to each person s activity and experience that without them no scientific explanation can even begin to analyze mind and action there is no mind without other people there is no psychological vulnerability that does not involve others the contributors to this book aim to establish a firm foundation for the role of relationships in human activity and health and to promote strong research by bringing together in one place most of the best research and theory on development and relationships their goal is to stimulate a more radical inclusion of relationships in mind an ecological focus on the ways that relationships constitute action feeling and thought the effort to understand personal relationships has traditionally focused on the individual characteristics of participants personal relationships and personal networks takes this analysis a step further focusing on research linking participants feelings and actions within a given personal relationship to the larger social context surrounding it author malcolm r parks expands on the idea that the initiation development maintenance and dissolution of relationships are inextricably connected to each participant s social network a perspective that allows for a better appreciation of our connection to the world and a greater understanding our significant power as social actors this book offers a new way to consider basic notions about how relationships form such as how particular people meet and how relationships are started among many findings the volume demonstrates that individuals in relationships feel closer and generally more connected when they also have a greater amount of contact with the members of each other s personal networks and when they believe that network members support their relationship additional topics discussed include how this social context model is applicable to different types of relationships how participants interact with network members how social networks are involved in the deterioration of personal relationships and what drives change in relationships students researchers and professionals in a wide variety of disciplines such as communication psychology sociology anthropology family studies clinical psychology public health nursing education and social work will find this book useful as will anyone seeking to better understand their own personal relationships
