this book examines approaches to reconciliation and peacebuilding in settler colonial post conflict and divided societies in contrast to current literature this book provides a broader assessment of reconciliation and conflict transformation by applying a distinctive multi level approach the analysis provides a unique intervention in the field one that significantly complicates received notions of reconciliation and transitional justice and considers conflict transformation across the constitutional institutional and relational levels of society drawing on extensive fieldwork in south africa northern ireland australia and guatemala the work presents an interdisciplinary study of the complex political challenges facing societies attempting to transition either from violence and authoritarianism to peace and democracy or from colonialism to post colonialism informed by theories of agonistic democracy the book conceives of reconciliation as a process that is deeply political and that prioritises the capacity to retain and develop democratic political contest in societies that have in other ways been able to resolve their conflicts the cases considered suggest that reconciliation is most likely an open ended process rather than a goal a process that requires divided societies to pay ongoing attention to reconciliatory efforts at all levels long after the eyes of the world have moved on from countries where the work of reconciliation is thought to be finished this book will be of great interest to students of reconciliation conflict transformation peacebuilding transitional justice and ir in general

an investigation into the transformation of publishing in the united states from a field in which jews were systematically excluded to one in which they became ubiquitous from the very first page this book is funnier and more gripping than a book on publishing has any right to be anyone interested in america s intellectual or jewish history must read this and anyone looking for an engrossing story should emily tamkin author of bad jews in the 1960s and 1970s complaints about a jewish literary mafia were everywhere although a conspiracy of jews colluding to control publishing in the united states never actually existed such accusations reflected a genuine transformation from an industry notorious for excluding jews to one in which they arguably had become the most influential figures josh lambert examines the dynamics between jewish editors and jewish writers how jewish women exposed the misogyny they faced from publishers and how children of literary parents have struggled with and benefited from their inheritances drawing on interviews and tens of thousands of pages of letters and manuscripts the literary mafia offers striking new discoveries about celebrated figures such as lionel trilling and gordon lish and neglected fiction by writers including ivan gold ann birstein and trudy gertler in the end we learn how the success of one minority group has lessons for all who would like to see american literature become more equitable baby safe haven laws which allow a parent to relinquish a newborn baby legally and anonymously at a specified institutional location such as a hospital or fire station were established in every state between 1999 and 2009 promoted during a time of heated public debate over policies on abortion sex education teen pregnancy adoption welfare immigrant reproduction and child abuse safe haven laws were passed by the majority of states with little contest these laws were thought to offer a solution to the consequences of unwanted pregnancies mothers would no longer be burdened with children they could not care for and newborn babies would no longer be abandoned in dumpsters yet while these laws are well meaning they inadequately address the social injustices that compel abandonment for the very small number of girls and women who abandon their newborns advocates of safe haven laws target teenagers women of color and poor women in particular with safe haven information under the assumption that they cannot offer good homes for their children laury oaks argues that the labeling of certain kinds of women as potential bad mothers who should consider anonymously giving up their newborns for adoption into a loving home should best be understood as an issue of reproductive justice safe haven discourses promote narrow images of who deserves to be a mother and reflect restrictive views on how we should treat women experiencing an unplanned pregnancy debt is the hidden engine driving undocumented migration to the united states so argues david stoll in this powerful chronicle of migrants moneylenders and swindlers in the guatemalan highlands one of the locales that collectively are sending millions of latin americans north in search of higher wages as an anthropologist stoll has witnessed the ixil mayas of nebjaj grow in numbers run out of land and struggle to find employment aid agencies have provided microcredits to turn the nebjajenses into entrepreneurs but credit alone cannot boost productivity in crowded mountain valleys which is why many recipients have invested the loans in smuggling themselves to the united states back home their remittances have inflated the price of land so high that only migrants can afford to buy it thus more nebjajenses have felt obliged to borrow the large sums needed to go north so many have done so that even before the great recession hit the u s in 2008 many were unable to find enough work to pay back their loans triggering a financial crash back home now migrants and their families are losing the land and homes they have pledged as collateral chain migration moneylending and large families stoll proposes have turned into pyramid schemes in which the poor transfer risk and loss to their near and dear
