since colonial times the sense of encountering an unseen transcendental presence within the natural world has been a characteristic motif in american literature and culture american writers have repeatedly perceived in nature something beyond itself and beyond themselves in this book john gatta argues that the religious import of american environmental literature has yet to be fully recognized or understood whatever their theology american writers have perennially construed the nonhuman world to be a source in rachel carson s words of something that takes us out of ourselves making nature sacred explores how the quest for natural revelation has been pursued through successive phases of american literary and intellectual history and it shows how the imaginative challenge of reading landscapes has been influenced by biblical hermeneutics though focused on adaptations of judeo christian religious traditions it also samples native american african american and buddhist forms of ecospirituality it begins with colonial new england writers such anne bradstreet and jonathan edwards re examines pivotal figures such as henry thoreau and john muir and takes account of writings by mary austin rachel carson and many others along the way the book concludes with an assessment of the spiritual renaissance underway in current environmental writing as represented by five noteworthy poets and by authors such as wendell berry annie dillard marilynne robinson peter matthiessen and barry lopez this engaging study should appeal not only to students of literature but also to those interested in ethics and environmental studies religious studies and american cultural history
