a history of colonial australia not of the famous and heroic but of the small people the anonymous people who were the heartbeat of a growing nation in this first book of his social history series the author sets out on a journey through australia s colonial history with his ancestors from british isles all arrived by the 1830s two on the first fleet in 1788 most are from central and southern england four are from two little villages close by each other in wiltshire semley and donhead st mary in addition two convicts and one free settler came from dublin monaghan and donegal in ireland and a farming family of four came from aberdeen in scotland it is surprising how much he finds out about them all joys successes and tragedies their lives are anything but dull james joseph wilson who narrowly escaped the gallows and was surprisingly literate for a man thrice convicted of burglary arrived in port jackson on board the prince regent in 1827 the colonial authorities assigned him to robert lowe one of the colony s early landholders lowe sent him to mudgee in north western new south wales to shepherd his flocks young 18 year old hutkeeper james joseph was one of the first inhabitants in the mudgee area he teamed up with fellow convict michael jones to look for land they married sisters jane and elizabeth harris daughters of free settlers and travelled northwest to the coonamble area 330 miles from sydney to set up their farms the two freed convicts and the harris sisters became his great great grandparents nine convicts are in the direct line of his ancestors he traces their lives against the social and historical background of colonial australia presenting a very different picture from the view usually found in school history books they all thrive taking advantage of their second chance this book is the story of their redemption besides offering the reader an interesting sometimes gripping family story he reveals the cultural continuities in which his ancestors acted and how they responded to those continuities in a totally different physical environment he seeks to discover to what extent the outlook culture and character of his ancestors worked to make his extended family and him what they are naming his family catholic is not gratuitous religion as a social and political force always plays an important role in a nation it is emphatically the case in australia where the national establishment threw together a sizable underclass of irish catholics with the protestant ascendancy how was that to work out in a democratic order where there was no legal disqualification based on religion he deals with that second of my original ancestors only three were catholic the rest were a mixture of protestants from the church of england to scottish wesleyans to dissenters how the wilsons ended up catholic makes an interesting story and finally perhaps most importantly he sketches a picture of the way australia developed as a new people and a new nation in 1950 most australians had an ancestry like his narrative features such as frames digressions or authorial intrusions have traditionally been viewed as distractions from or anomalies in the narrative proper in theory and the novel jeffrey williams exposes these elements as more than simple disruptions analysing them as registers of narrative reflexivity that is moments that represent and advertise the functioning of narrative itself williams argues that narrative encodes and advertises its own functioning and modal form he takes a range of novels from the english canon tristram shandy joseph andrews the turn of the screw wuthering heights lord jim and heart of darkness are amongst the novels examined and shows how narrative technique is never beyond or outside plot he poses a series of theoretical questions such as about reflexivity imitation and fictionality to offer a striking and original contribution to readings of the english novel as well as to discussions of theory in general focusing on the oceanic war rather than on the war in the great lakes this study charts the war of 1812 from the perspectives of the two opposing navies at sea one the largest navies in the world the other a small upstart navy just three decades old while american naval leadership searched for a means of contesting Britain's naval dominance the English sought to destroy the U.S. Navy and protect its oceanic highways instead of describing battles between opposing warships Kevin McCranie evaluates entire cruises by American and British men of war noting both successes and failures and how they translated into broader strategies in the process his study becomes a history of how the two navies fought the oceanic war linking high level governmental decisions about strategy to the operational use of fleets in the Atlantic and Caribbean and from the South Pacific to the Indian Ocean this comprehensive work offers a balanced appraisal of the sea war taking into account the strategic considerations of both sides and how the leadership from each side assessed planned and implemented operational concepts it draws on a wealth of British and American archival sources to help the reader understand strategic imperatives and the correlation between these imperatives and why the oceanic war was conducted in the manner it was all American warships cruises not just those that resulted in battles are covered but the author's action packed accounts of battles hold special appeal the European Union (EU) has provided trade preferences to the African Caribbean and Pacific (ACP) countries since 1975 to maintain these preferences a series of economic partnership agreements (EPAs) between the EU and regional groupings of ACP countries are being agreed negotiations started around 2003 and many framework agreements have been signed as multilateral negotiations within the World Trade Organisation have stalled EPAs are currently the single most important policy issue for ACP trade this volume assesses EPAs and the potential impact on ACP countries provides guidance for ACP negotiators in future negotiations and introduces methods to analyse the impact of future trade reforms the essential features are that ACP countries commit to remove tariffs on substantially all imports from the EU and the EU offers improved market access to ACP exporters for ACP countries the major impacts will be increased imports from the eu hence a loss of tariff revenue and increased competition from imports in domestic and regional markets implying significant adjustment costs which may be offset by some increases in exports to the eu this collection excellently outlines a variety of analytical methods that can be used to assess the potential economic effects of trade policy reforms shows how these can be applied to epas and derives implications for the issues that should be addressed in negotiating the details of agreements this valuable contribution offers a balanced assessment of the issues and should be essential reading for postgraduates and researchers focussing on development economics furthermore the book is written in an accessible style and should be an excellent resource for trade negotiators and government officials concerned with trade relations as well as officials in the european commission individual countries acp commonwealth eu and in multilateral organizations wto uneca world bank unctad link invariants this section includes the author s own important results regarding new invariants of virtual knots the book concludes with an introduction to knots in 3 manifolds and legendrian knots and links including chekanov s differential graded algebra dga construction knot theory is notable not only for its expert presentation of knot theory s state of the art but also for its accessibility it is valuable as a professional reference and will serve equally well as a text for a course on knot theory
