during the nineteenth century the balkan countries became the subject of a rather romantic fascination for the public at large this has had important consequences for the way in which the region has been viewed since then and the creation of this image has had an impact on the many aspects of west european and north american responses to the balkans ranging from diplomatic and military involvement to the burgeoning flow of tourists this vision of the area has been created in large measure by the writing of women travellers such as those represented in this volume the achievements of these women are quite remarkable in many cases their travels were adventurous and even dangerous reaching into parts of the countryside which were remote and hardly known to outsiders not only as travellers but also in the fields of medical and military service scholarship and education journalism and literature did these travellers contribute in very significant ways to the expansion of women's horizons and to the attempt to gain greater freedom for women in society in general men and women writers of the 1930s is a searching critique of the issues of memory and gender during this dynamic decade montefiore asks two principle questions what part does memory play in the political literature of and about 1930s britain and what were the roles of women both as writers and as signifying objects in constructing that literature montefiore's topical analysis of 1930s mass unemployment fascist uprising and appeasement is shockingly relevant in society today issues of class anti fascist historical novels post war memoirs of Auden generation writers and neglected women poets are discussed at length writers include George Orwell Virginia Woolf W. H. Auden Storm Jameson Jean Rhys Rebecca West

Black Lamb and Grey Falcon 1989

whilst young ladies in the Victorian and Edwardian eras were expected to have many creative accomplishments they were not expected to travel unaccompanied and certainly not to the remote corners of Southeast Europe then part of the crumbling Ottoman Empire but Edith Durham was no ordinary lady in 1900 at the age of 37 Durham set sail for the Balkans for the first time her trip was intended as a means of recovering from a period of ill health and as a break from the stifling monotony of caring for her ailing mother her experiences on this trip were to change the course of her life kindling a profound love for the region which saw her return frequently in the following decades she became a confidante of the King of Montenegro ran a hospital in Macedonia and following the outbreak of the first Balkan War in 1912 became one of the world's first female war correspondents back in England she was renowned as an expert on the region writing the highly successful book High Albania and along with other aficionados such as the MP Aubrey Herbert becoming an advocate for the people of the Balkans in British political life and society King Zog of Albania once said that before Durham visited the Balkans Albania was but a geographical expression by the time she left he added her championing of his compatriots' desire for freedom had helped add a new state to the map durham was tremendously popular in the region itself earning her the affectionate title queen of the mountains and an enduring legacy which continues unabated until this day yet she has been all but forgotten in the country of her birth marcus tanner here tells the fascinating story of durham s relationship with the balkans painting a vivid portrait of a remarkable and sometimes formidable woman who was several decades ahead of her time
